THE PARIS ROTHSCHILDS.

The Rothschilds deserve well of the Parisians. They spend their money royally. There is not a more hospitable house in the city than that of the Baron Alphonso in the Rue St Florentine. The Baronne Alphonse de Rothschild—a daughter of the London branch of the family—is a charming woman, and a perfect hostess, and, although a grandmama, has retained a fair amount of good looks. Baron and Baronne Adolphe de Rothschild give dinners of a dozen covers, once a week, throughout the season, in the handsome dining-room on the first floor, which is opposite the picture-gallery. Now and then, also, a more splendid entertainment (to which a large number of guests are invited) in the grand hall downstairs, and the mansion in the Parc Monceaux is often still ablaze with light, long after the gardens have been plunged into darkness. Authors, press men, artists, and musicians are often bidden to these feasts. The Baroness Nathaniel is also a good friend and patron of literature and art, besides being an artist of no mean order herself. Her cousin, the Baroness Solomon, is a widow, and for many seasons past her house has only been open to a few private friends; but this year she sent out invitations for a grand ball, covered in part of her garden, installed an orchestra in the gallery of the great hall and opened up a series of crimson and white drawing-rooms worthy of a palace. Mlle. Helena de Rothschild is sole daughter of her house and home and as such somewhat despotic. These festivities were given in her honor and are, so they say, to be repeated in a week or so. The heiress is not after the usual pattern of young ladyism here. She has a suite of apartments of her own, eight horses for her separate use, is passionately fond of riding and driving, is in the habit of running down to Frascati's every now and then, (under the chaperonage of a governess), and when in town entertains her girl friends quite independently of the Baronne in her private dining-room or in the salle d'armes—a room hung around with trophies of arms—which she particularly affects.—San Francisco Argonaut.

HOW STORMS ARE PREDICTED.

Wife—"John, how do the officers of the United States signal service predict storms with such almost perfect accuracy?"

Husband—"They don't do it, Sally. I can beat them myself. I haven't failed in a single prediction for two years."

W.—"Pshaw, John! I don't believe it. How can you tell when a storm is coming?"

H.—"By watching the whites of your eyes, Sally.—Newman Independent.

A GLORIOUS FUTURE.

Illinoisian—You have seen William Shakspeare's plays, of course?

Missourian—One or two of them only.

Illinoisian—Well, what do you think of Shakspeare as a playwright?

Missourian—I look upon him as a rising man.—New York Sun.

The Democrats Will Leave the Legislative Offices Alone in the Hands of the Present Incumbents.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Feb. 8.—The senate was not in session yesterday. The house was announced to meet at 11 o'clock, but when that hour arrived the speaker and one-half of the members were absent. After waiting for them half an hour, Secretary Smith called the house to order and Judge Gardiner was called to the chair. "A motion to adjourn is in order," said he, and it was made, put and carried in about two seconds.

Mr. Jewett's bill regulating the transportation of property by railways or other common carriers was passed. This bill is fashioned after the national inter-state commerce bill recently passed by congress.

The bill prohibiting non-members from wearing the G. A. R. badge was passed.

The committee reported favorably on a bill authorizing the counties to offer three cents per head for English sparrows; also favorably on a bill appropriating $140,000 for the maintenance of the three insane hospitals for this year and the two following.

It costs the state about $1,600 a day to support the general assembly. Of this $650 is expended for the senate and $950 for the house.

The democrats have had enough of joint convention and while they have not agreed definitely on the details of their future action, they have about decided not to go into convention any more, even for the purpose of electing a state librarian, state statician, trustees of the benevolent institutions, directors of the state prisions, etc. All those positions are at present held by democrats, who under the law, hold until their successors are elected and qualified. In the absence of an election they will either continue in office or be re-appointed by the governor. Some of the democrats say, and Mr. Gordon, of Putnam, is very decidedly of this view, that if a fair and just bill for the reorganization of all the institutions is offered they will support it, and let the apppointing power be solely in the hands of the governor.

The general fund of the state treasury is practically exhausted. The auditor of state will probably suspend payment from this fund to-day or to-morrow unless temporary relief is had from the present state legislature. There has been no positive refusal to honor orders as yet but because of the lowness of the funds and of the fact that the new treasurer of state will come into office on Thursday and it is therefore necessary for the auditor and treasurer to balance their books, the auditor is to-day paying out as little as possible, in order that the accounts may not be changed.

The location of the monument has not been decided, but it will probably be in the capitol grounds. The association intend to invite the submission of designs in May.

The democrats and republicans of the Indiana legislature balloted for next presidential candidate before adjournment Friday. The democratic vote was: Cleveland 30, Hill 16, McDonald 5, Thurman 3, Bayard 2. Republican vote: Harrison 38, Blaine 20, Sherman 8, Gresham 4, Weaver 4—K. of L. voting for latter.

There are several revivals in progress within the boundaries of Montgomery county. The Methodist churches at Almo, Waveland and Linder have received several accessions to their membership. The Presbyterian church at Shannondale has had about 100 accessions. The Christian church at Crawfordsville is holding a protracted meeting. The Parkersburg Presbyterian church has been holding a series of meetings. Several persons have also united with the two Presbyterian churches and the Methodist church at Crawfordsville. About fifteen persons have joined the United Brethren church at College Grove. Several additions have also been made to the colored churches at Crawfordsville.

AT LAST.

A Comprehensive Plan Agreed Upon for Reorganization of the Nickel Plate Railway.

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—The questions that for months have vexed the holders of Nickel Plate bonds, and for six weeks have been the subject of active negotiations, are now in the way of settlement under a plan upon which all parties, according to Mr. Stillman, of the law firm of Butler, Stillman & Hubbard, are virtually agreed. The plan is a very long one. Its substantial features are as follows: The Nickel Plate property will be covered by the issue of $20,000,000 of 4 per cent. bonds to run for fifty years. These bonds must stand on their own merit, without guarantee from the Lake Shore road. The fixed charges under the new plan will be $80,000 a year. Whenever the road may earn in any year $90,000 or more $10,000 must be turned into the sinking fund for the payment of the bonds at 102, if that figure will buy them. When the earnings do not reach so much, or the bonds cannot be bought at 102, the sinking fund will lapse for that year. The present Nickel Plate bond will receive 112 in new bonds, and the stockholders will pay an assessment of 10 per cent. on $5,000,000, their present holdings being converted at one-half their face value into new stock. Preferred stock will be issued for the amount of assessment. This will leave the company with $3,200,000 of first mortgage, $5,000,000 cash, and surplus earnings of $1,000,000 now in the hands of the receiver. All the road's obligations will thus have been met and the road will be fully equipped anew and put in first-class order. Foreclosure proceedings under the plan will begin at once. Mr. Stillman thinks that the reorganization will be perfected by June 1.

HOW SHE KEPT IT.

Miss Betty was a remarkably young and handsome looking woman for her years, and she never told anyone how old she was.

"Gracious me, Miss Betty," said an old acquaintance admiringly one day, "how well you keep you age."

"Thanks," she replied with a smile.

"How do you ever manage to do it?"

"Oh, easy enough; I never give it away."—Merchant Traveler.

IN BONDAGE.

A Negro Ignorant of the Freedom of His Race is Made to Serve His Old Master Ever Since the War.

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—A special from Charleston, South Carolina, says: "Information of a reliable character has just been received here of the discovery of a negro man in one of the narrow valleys, near the Hog Back mountain, not far from Greenville, who has just learned of his emancipation. His story is that since the war, he has been working for Mr. Holly and that he was not allowed to come back to his kinsfolks; that he was flogged by his matter, who gave him no money and few clothes. The man's name is Calvin Garmany. He ran off to the mountains just after the war and was only recently heard of by his brother, who lived near Greenville and who rescued him from servitude last week."

Detective Hulligan Dead.

CLEVELAND, O., Feb. 8.—Detective Hulligan, one of the police officers assaulted by desperadoes, at Ravenna, died at 9:30 o'clock this morning.

INFAMOUS.

A Miscreant Fires Upon a Passenger Train.

CINCINNATI, O., Feb. 8.—As the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Indianapolis train was about crossing the state line from Indiana into Ohio yesterday, a bullet fired by some unknown person came crashing through the window of the passenger car, passing closely in front of the head of Mr. A. P. Mitchell, of the firm of Valette & Mitchell, of New York City, and burying itself in the woodwork on the other side of the car. No clew of the miscreant has been found.

MACON, Ga., Feb. 8.—Two freight trains on the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia railroad collided at 3 o'clock this morning at Dubois, forty-nine miles below here, badly injuring Engineer Williams and killing a negro.

Sentenced for Contempt of Court.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Feb. 8.—Edward Loew, city editor of the Arbeiter Zeitung, was yesterday sentenced by Judge Sloan to thirty days labor in the house of correction. The decision was for contempt of court, in causing to be published libelous statements in connection with the trial of Paul Groutketch, the anarchist.

IMPORTANT.

The Wabash to Pass Into the Hands of Its Owners.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 8.—The purchasing committee of the Wabash railroad property announces that on March 1, they expect to take possession of their property, complying with the conditions of the sales by paying to the court $1,000,000 and give a bond for $1,000,000 to pay such awards as the court might make in winding up the affairs of the coal company.

A Restraining Injunction Dissolved.

CINCINNATI, Feb. 8.—A decision has been rendered by Judge Huston, of the common pleas court of this county, dissolving the injunction restraining the Emery Bros., of this city from attaching the property of the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton Railroad company, found in the state of New York to satisfy a judgment obtained in New York in 1882. The amount involved is $121,000 with interest. The claim for unpaid interest on the bonds of the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Indianapolis railroad guaranteed by the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton company.

ALMOST ENDED.

The Freight Handlers Strike Will Soon End Against the Strikers.

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—It is generally believed that the great strike is about to end. The Times says: "The fact is, the freight handlers strike is confessed to be a failure, even by themselves. They were refused work when they offered to return. The Pennsylvania and Jersey Central roads probably had the most offers of this kind. Both companies have an unusually mixed class of green hands."

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—There was considerable activity on the piers this morning and freight was being moved with much more dispatch than on any day since the strike. Many of the old freight handlers and longshoremen are coming back to work—not at places where they are known, but where they they are least likely to be known.

THE DISABILITY BILL.

Doubt as to Its Fate Fate—The Enormous Sum it Will Take From the Treasury.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—There is a good deal of doubt expressed in the official circles as to the fate of the disability pension bill. Many take the ground that if the bill becomes a law it will nearly bankrupt the country. Estimates of $150,000 are made as necessary to carry out its provisions. The steady growth of the pension fund since 1886 is an interesting study. In the year named there were 85,986 pensioners and the disbursements were $8,525,153. In 1875 the number of pensioners had grown to 234,825, with disbursements aggregating $29,683,116, while in 1886 there were 367,783 pensioners, receiving $64,584,270. The pension office estimates that the disability bill will, if it becomes a law, almost double the pension roll this year, and that the bill for the removal of the arrears limit, which will probably be voted upon next week, will, if enacted into law, cost the government $222,000,000.

In the senate to-day Mr. Ingalls presented a memorial from the citizens of New Lexington, Ohio, asking for the initiation of negotiations for the acquisition of Canada. Referred to the committee on foreign relations.

Secretary Manning, in giving his views on the Canadian fishery squabble, again puts in a lick for tariff reform. "It is much to be regretted that mediaeval tariff laws, like that cruel legacy of war which still encumbers the statute books of the United States, or a mediæval non-intercourse policy, like that of the Dominion of Canada, approved by the queen in council on the threshold of her majesty's jubilee year, should be the divided disgrace of our common civilization," is the text on which he grows eloquent.

The bill now before the house committee on labor, extending the provisions of the eight-hour law to letter carriers, appears to be hopelessly "hung up." There is an undoubted majority in the house in favor of the bill, but it is alleged that Chairman John J. O'Neill is committed against it and will not allow it to leave his hands. A delegation of letter-carriers from all over the country is now in the city, and they are paying their respects to the St. Louis congressman in no complimentary manner.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—In executive session of the senate, yesterday afternoon, the nomination of John E. Banta, postmaster at Muncie, was confirmed.

Richard S. Davis, of Greenville, Ind., and Thomas Stevens, of Mount Vernon, were admitted yesterday, to practice before the interior department.

Representative Lowry was yesterday granted a leave absence from the house for ten days, on important business.

The third assistant postmaster general issued a statement yesterday showing the number of special deliveries for quarters ending September 30th and December 31. For Indianapolis, for the quarter ending with September, the number of deliveries was 2,592; for the quarter ending with December, 3,149.

Morris L. Miller, of Oneida county, New York, has submitted his petition of right to test the constitutionality of the civil-service act to the supreme court en banc without argument.

It is stated that Judge Holman will retire from congress at the close of the fiftieth congress and if he reappears in public life it will be as governor of Indiana. Some of Mr. Voorhees' most intimate friends state that he is very tired of the cares of state, and would gladly yield his position and commence the pratice of his profession in New York could he be sure of a democratic successor.

WHAT HE WANTED.

A Kentuckian called on the President with a view of obtaining an office.

"Well, sir," said the President, who was busy, "what will you have?"

The Kentuckian's anxiety in behalf of his object and the rather abrupt manner of the President confused him somewhat and he stammered out:

"M-make it the s-same as be-before."—New York Times.

THE total quantity of textile fabrics produced in the whole of Japan last year was 1,532,021 pieces of silk goods, 5,309,639 pieces of cotton goods, 407,183 pieces of hemp goods, and 860,479 pieces of miscellaneous goods.

SARGENT S. PRENTISS was the ideal orator of the South. A large and excellent oil portrait, presented by Judge Morris, of Natchez, has been hung in the room of the Supreme Court of Louisiana, the field of most of Mr. Prentiss' oratorical triumphs.

"COAL-OIL JOHNNY," who was made immensely rich by the discovery of petroleum, and who scattered his wealth with such a lavish hand, has descended step by step until he now has no place to lay his head save in a dreary cell in the Mount Holly (N. J.) Jail. The quondam possessor of millions is now a common tramp.

THE Japanese Government is said to have decided to authorize a new style of dress for the Judges of the law courts. Judges will be required by the new rules to wear a black garment when presiding at civil cases, and a red garment when presiding at criminal cases. The new rules will come into force in March next. A new style of dress will be authorized also for lawyers.

QUEEN VICTORIA'S dinner parties are very dreary affairs. It is said that in all the fifty years of the Queen's reign there has never been any sort of allusion to political or personal topics at her table. Everything of the sort is strictly prohibited, and proper names are never mentioned, so that nothing can possibly be more vapid than the little conversation that goes on, the usual subjects being the weather, scenery, art, and music.

ONE morning a Keyport, N. J., man built a fire in the kitchen range and was preparing to leave the room, when he heard a variety of strange noises from within the stove. At first he was startled, and then began an investigation. He had no sooner removed the cover than a large owl jumped out of the range and began flying blindly about the room. The bird was caught, but died in a short time. In the night it had come down through a long tile chimney into the range.

NOT long ago a man in Columbia, Pa., gave as a wedding present to a York couple an 88 clock, which he had bought on the installment plan. He paid $6 and was slow about paying the other two. So the agent, who knew where the clock was, went to York, scared the bride into giving it up, and then disappeared. The groom brought suit against the agent, but he could not be found, and the young man had to pay costs. He says when he marries his second wife he wants no presents on the installment plan.

JAMES PIERCE, of Shady Grove, La., saw bear tracks in a swamp on his farm, and a party was organized to hunt the bear. While the men and dogs were in the swamp Mr. Pierce walked through the fields adjacent unarmed. Suddenly a big bear came tearing out of the swamp. Pierce knew it would get away if not turned back, so he seized a club and chased bruin back and forth through the fields, whacking him well meanwhile, until the animal at length turned to the swamp again, where it was shot and killed.

THE Massachusetts Supreme Court affirms the decision of the lower courts that a sleeping car company is liable to a passenger for any loss he sustains by robbery while occupying a berth in one of the company's cars. "It is the company's duty," the court says, "to use reasonable means to guard the passenger against theft; and if through want of care the personal effects of a passenger, such as he might reasonably carry with him, are stolen, the company is liable. Such a rule is required by public policy and by the interests of both the passenger and the company."

THERE are forty people who imagine they have a lizard in their stomach where one real case exists. This is on the authority of a Chicago doctor, who goes further and avows that nothing but a tape-worm can live an hour in the human stomach.

AT a meeting of the "Society of Medical Jurisprudence," in New York, Dr. Brill objected to hanging, on the ground that it neither killed instantly nor destroyed consciousness instantly. The methods of killing by electricity, by poisoning, and by the garrote, he objected to as not more prompt nor less painful and barbarous. The guillotine, he said, was the best means. By instantly severing the blood conduits, muscles and nerves of the neck the victim was instantly killed, instantly losing sensation or consciousness. Shooting through the head or brain, where the gun was discharged from a fixed rest after being aimed by an anatomical expert, the Doctor said, was better than hanging, though not so good as chopping the head off. Another physician, Dr. Peters, favored the garrote for murderers, holding that the use of electricity or any other medical agent was degrading to the science of medicine, while shooting is a military punishment, and not sufficiently degrading. A lawyer advocated chloroforming criminals before executing them, while another advocated turning them over to a medical commission for scientific purposes, even going so far as to indorse vivisection of them.

EX-MAYOR GRACE, of New York, and his brother Michael will spend $2,000,000 in this country for locomotives and rolling stock, on behalf of an English syndicate, to equip the Peruvian railroads, which it is proposed to extend. The locomotives will be of peculiar design, especially constructed for running up steep grades. Cars for freight and passenger traffic will be sent and will be constructed for the peculiarity of that country and climate. The main object in building and equipping this road is to reach the renowned silver mines of Cerra de Pasco, which are situated about 150 miles from the Pacific coast in a basin 1,200 feet above the level of the sea. Although the mines are less than two miles square, it is estimated that they have yielded since their discovery more than $500,000,000 of the precious metal. Ten years ago Henry Meiggs, who had taken contracts for building the great railroad system of Peru, which was designed to bring all her interior mining and agricultural districts within easy reach of the coast, conceived the plan of extending the Transandean Railroad, which has since only been constructed eighty miles from the sea. He further proposed to open a drainage tunnel, tapping the famous silver mines of Peru 150 feet below the level of the present workings, thus carrying off the rapid accumulations of water that have always been a serious obstacle in working the mines. It is now proposed to prosecute this work vigorously, and new contracts have been made with the Peruvian Government. A scientific expedition, including several Philadelphians, was sent on to Peru last summer to prepare the way for the builders.

A SINGULAR accident occurred on the Shenandoah Valley Railroad, says a Hagerstown (Md.) dispatch to the Baltimore American. As the north-bound passenger train was nearing Buchanan, some one noticed that the hose attached to the air-brakes was leaking. The train was stopped and the entire crew left the train for the purpose of repairing the leak, leaving on board the passengers, the express messenger, the postal clerk, and the newsboy. The brakeman was sent back to flag a freight that was coming in the rear. The freight soon made its appearance, and, not having been notified in time to stop on the heavy downward grade, plunged into the hindmost car of the passenger train, which was a Pullman, wrecking the greater part of it and badly injuring the rest of the train. The concussion was so great that the throttle valve of the passenger engine was thrown wide open and the train leaped forward with an impetus of over a mile a minute. So sudden was the start that the crew was unable to board the engine. The wildcat train ran at a high rate of speed until the steam was exhausted, when it came to a standstill about fifteen miles from the place of collision. During the flight the passengers were thrown about in their seats, and were almost wild with terror. Apprehending that some southbound train might collide with the runaway after it had stopped, all the passengers left the cars and built fires in the fields to await the freight, which they thought would bring up the crew of their train. After the lapse of over an hour the rear train hove in sight, and the passenger engineer and fireman were soon at their places. The brakeman who had been sent back to flag the freight no sooner saw that a collision was inevitable than he struck for the woods and has not yet turned up. Several of the passengers received bruises, but no one was seriously injured by the collision.

WIGS.

About 1620 premature baldness compelled Louis XIII. to don a wig, and the fashion of false hair for men as well as women then really began to make its way to France, the future scene of its greatest splendor, and the arbiter then, as now, of the whole world of fashion. Wig-making had almost become a lost art, and the French barbers at first could only fix the hair on a leather cap; then they formed a sort of network, and in time acquired uncommon skill in attaching single hairs to bits of silk and in tressing them into any desired shape. Louis XIV. was king thirty years before he regularly wore a peruke, and in his first the false hair was artfully mingled with the natural locks. But, everything being great in his reign, wigs had to partake of the majesty of the age, and they grew to an immensity never known before or since. A single peruke sometimes weighed two pounds, cost 2,000 or 3,000 francs, and required the cropping of ten other heads. Indeed, Binette, the wig-maker of Louis XIV., is reported as saying that to cover the head of the sovereign he would despoil the heads of all his subjects. This worthy had his reward, for the great folio wig, the grandest of the species, is still known in France by his name. There was, of course, a cabinet des perruques at Versailles, and among the hirsute miracles enshrined in his large glass press was the golden wig worn by Louis XIV. when he appeared as Phœbus in a ballet. No sooner was this mighty monarch pleased to open his royal eyes each morning, than a barber humbly bowed before him and presented two or more perukes to be chosen from. When the king had risen and had his own hair combed, a short wig was brought him for his morning reception, after which he put on the wig of the day. He sometimes changed the wig during the day, as when returning from the chase, or going to walk or to mass. At one time forty wig-makers were appointed to the court, and later a corporation of 200 was formed for Paris and vicinity, their statutes enacting the use of white tin basins as signs, in distinction from the yellow ones of the surgeons. The foppish abbes of the time were eager enough to be up with the fashion in wigs, and succeeded after much opposition from the more sober-minded of the cloth.—Lippincott's Magazine.

"AH, Mrs. Crimsonbeak," said Miss Fussenfeather, after conversing with that lady's husband at the musical one evening, "I've found your husband out at last." "That's not a difficult thing to do," replied Mrs. Crimsonbeak, indifferently. "Come round to the house any time of night and you'll always find him out."—Exchange.

The Breath of a chronic catarrh patient is often so offensive that he cannot go into society and he becomes an object of disgust. After a time ulceration sets in, the spongy bones are attacked and frequently entirely destroyed. A constant source of discomfort is the dripping of purulent secretions into the throat, sometimes producing inveterate bronchitis, which in its turn has been the exciting cause of pulmonary disease. The brilliant results which have attended its use for years past properly designate Ely's Cream Balm as by far the best and only real cure.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferers at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub wakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

SO AWFULLY ENGLISH.

The things in which the New Yorkers ape the English, writes an observer to the Brooklyn Eagle, are the baggy trousers, heavy boots, an inane expression of countenance, the single glass, a lumbering and bent-kneed gait, an ungraceful carriage, and a monstrously unpleasant drawl. These are the characteristics of the London cockney and English gentleman who come over here often to tell their American friends in confidence that their first impression on meeting a lot of Anglomaniacs is precisely the same as that they experienced in London if they have the misfortune to fall in with a lot of loud voices and artificial cockneys You never catch an Anglomaniac copy the dignified manner, reticence, and studious though seldom graceful politeness of an English gentleman. They prefer the coarser characteristics of the cockney. In the same way the dainty dandies of Paris who formerly revelled in varnished boots of the smallest possible dimensions, the snuggest of gloves, and the nattiest clothes imaginable, have taken to loud and horsey clothes of the cumbersome design and coarse material of English stablemen. The peculiar thing in which the English ape the French is now the cut of the hair—and if anything makes a robust and highly colored English face look absurd it is the finicky arrangements of the hair in vogue in Paris—and the manner and particularly the language of the men of Paris. It seems to be the rule with Englishmen to avoid speaking their own language as much as possible, and of all nations they speak the most execrable French. The rather ingenious theory has been advanced that Anglomania in New York is the result of the copyright laws. As it costs American publishers nothing to issue foreign novels as fast as they come out, the result of there being no international copyright laws, the country has been flooded with British novels for years. There have been no American authors of consequence, so publishers preferred to bring out books for which they had to pay the authors nothing, rather than bind themselves to pay a fixed royalty. Therefore nearly every book which the rising generation has read during the last twenty years has narrated the love experiences of Lord Cecil Montmorenci d'Montressor and Lady Gwendoline Gladysse du Nothing in the castles and mansions of England. Overlooking the fact that English novelists never, by any chance, give their heroes and heroines English names, it is a fact that nowhere can one find such slavish admiration, adulation, sycophancy, and toadying love for the British aristocracy, as in the average English novel. The dearest wish of half the youth of America to-day is to look and act like the Lord Cecils they have so frequently read about.

KILLED BY METEORIC STONES.

Considering the number of meteoric stones which reach the earth's surface it would not be surprising if many lives had been destroyed by them. It is stated that loss of life resulted from a large fall in Africa; that about the year 1020 many persons and animals were killed: that in 1511, about 5 o'clock one evening, a priest was struck and killed; and that still later, in 1650, a monk was killed. But these, according to Mr. James R. Gregory, seem to be the only instances recorded of death from falling meteorites.

THE SMALL BOY'S QUEST.

A Persian philosopher being asked by what method he had acquired so much knowledge, answered: "By not being prevented by shame from asking questions when I was ignorant" According to this notion, a 5-year-old boy traveling in the cars with his mother, ought to acquire enough knowledge in a journey of fifteen miles to split his head wide open.—Norristown Herald.

In Barbadoes, one Sunday, the captain of a vessel from New York saw a very important colored lady, gloved, shoed, and parasoled, walking to church with a barefooted colored servant, carrying her bag and prayer-book. He was astonished at the lady of color being able to keep up so much state, but was told that the couple were sisters, and if he would wait until next Sunday he would see the situation reversed.

Pond's Extract.

As a household remedy there are few family medicines that are as popular as Pond's Extract. It can be found in the houses of almost every family, north, south, east or west, in this country and is largely used abroad. First made over forty years ago in a small way, it has continued to increase till now its sales run into millions of bottles a year. Its uses are almost universal and one of its valuable properties is that it is perfectly harmless. In cases of wounds, its healing powers are wonderful, its astringent properties stopping the flow of blood; for bad wounds its just the thing to apply until the doctor arrives. For inflammations, the pain and swelling go down immediately on its application. To name what it would do would fill a book. Reader, we ask you, if you have not already done so, to try it." Be sure to get the genuine.—St. Louis (Mo.) Republican.

MIGHT WE ALL GO NAKED?

I lived seven years in Colorado, and have herded sheep in weather so cold that the food I took out for lunch froze hard in my pockets—thermometer sometimes fifteen or twenty degrees below zero—and I used to wear less clothing than I do now, although naturally sensitive to cold, owing to weak circulation. I well remember a half-witted man, Marvin by name (who has since then committed a dreadful crime,) who used to get a precarious living by hunting in the mountains, and who, in the coldest winter weather, went about in rags—practically unclothed. Another "old-timer," who was a teamster, invariably went about in the severest weather and most biting winds, with his coat open and his chest perfectly naked and exposed. Surely the street Arabs, who are at once half-starved and half-naked, prove that the power to resist cold is merely a matter of habit, and that we migh make ourselves "all face" if we liked, though doubtless a modicum of clothing is comfortable, if of doubtful sanitary value. I firmly believe that overcoats are the most fruitful cause of winter colds, and that the best and safest plan is to make little or no difference between summer and winter clothing.—W. Mathieu Williams, in Clothier and Furnisher.

Captain Mitchell, of the bark Antoine Sala, New York and Havana trade, came home in May, entirely helpless with rheumatism. He went to the mountains, but receiving no benefit, at his wife's request began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla. He immediately began to improve; in two months his rheumatism was all gone, and he sailed in command of his vessel a well man. Hoods Sarsaparilla will help you. Sold by all druggists.

Use after each meal Scott's Emulsion; It is as palatable as milk and easily digested. Delicate people improve raddily with its use. For consumption, throat affections and bronchitis it is unequalled. FRUIT HOUSE PRICES FOR '87

Quite a change has taken place in a great many goods the last sixty days, the tendency being in most cases upwards. This is the case, especially in Coffee and Dried Fruits, Sugars, Teas, Syrups, Spices and Tobaccos, have not advanced, but from indications they will. It will pay our customers to purchase liberally. We have just received forty hogsheads of choice New Orleans Sugar.

No advance on them. Choice yellow, 5c; best standard A coffee white, 6c crushed, powdered and granulated, 6½c; choice yellow New Orleans, 4½c.

NO ADVANCE ON TEAS,

Yet they will not likely remain at such low prices in the face of the large advance on Coffee. We continue to maintain our prestige in the Tea trade. Our trade has grown immensely in that line. People have no longer to send off to purchase their Teas. In order to save money we keep up the plan of buying in large lots of the importers and re-selling direct to our customers at a small profit, thereby saving to our customers the intermediate profits of jobber and wholesale dealer—which is not less than 10 to 20c.

Good, 15c per pound; choice, 30c; best, 50c. Imperial tea—Green, good, 30c; best, 50c, Gunpowder tea, 30c; best, 50c. Oolong or Black tea, 20c, 30c; best, 50c; Japan tea, 20c, 30c; best, 50c. Just give them a trial and satisfy yourself.

Coffee—Rio, Java and Roasted.

Best Rio coffee, 15c, per pound; best roasted Rio, 18c per pound; German coffee, 20c per pound; Housekeepers' Choice, 23c per pound; roasted Java, 25c per pound.

The Business Men's exchange meets to-night at their parlors on Clinton street. Some interesting facts will be let loose on the toll road monopoly.

The editors of morning papers complain that they could not see the eclipse of the moon at 3 o'clock this morning. It hustles a night editor mighty hard to find the front door latch at that hour.

At a meeting of the congregation of the First Presbyterian church last evening Messrs. E. H. McDonald, E. P. Williams, A. E. Hoffman, J. B. White and H. C. Moderwell were elected trustees for the ensuing year.

Notwithstanding that the railroads and monopolists made a strong demand on President Cleveland to veto the interstate commerce bill, he proved himself true to his high trust and the interests of the people by making the measure a law. Mr. Cleveland is deeper in the hearts of the people than a few politicians and newspaper writers realize.

The insurance men of the state are proposing to make a brisk fight against the bill introduced in the house by Mr. Ibach, which, they claim, would work a great hardship on the companies if passed. It provides that in case of total loss by fire, whatever the value of the property may have been, the insured shall be entitled to the full face value of the policy.

The Warsaw Times says: "Mrs. T. P. Keator, who furnishes the dramatic and society news for the Sunday Fort Wayne Gazette, has created a popular department in each of these specialties, and is observant, pains-taking, and racy, and nothing in the Sunday Gazette is more closely scanned than the contributions of 'Judith.'"

D. W. Caldwell, receiver of the Nickel Plate, filed his petition, before Judge O'Rourke, asking leave to settle a claim for damages made by T. M. McKinney, administrator of William S. McKinney, arising out of the killing of the latter at the Nickel Plate bridge west of the city this winter. The receiver was authorized to compromise the claim for $1,000. Hon. R. C. Bell filed the petition for Mr. Caldwell.

Mr. C. A. Bookwalter, of this city, was yesterday chosen secretary of the state printing bureau, by the republican state officers. Governor Gray objected to the removal of Mr. Fish, the present incumbent. Mr. Bookwalter is a Knight of Labor and a member of the Typographical union, of which he is president. It is said that Governor Gray and State Auditor Rice, before the latter went out of office, offered the clerkship of the state board of printing to Thomas Gruelle, the editor of the Labor Signal, but that he declined it.

The marked attention and increasing attendance at the Christian church revivals, conducted by Evangelist Blaney, evince at least that there is power in the plain logical Bible truths. Everybody says, "How plain he makes the Bible." Hear him to-night on the deepest subject of revelations, viz.: "The Resurrection of the Dead." Services all this week.

Lavina A. Bond has sold to Joseph Nichter lot 47, Bond's Third addition, for $731. The O. A. The water in the rivers is very high and overflowing the banks in many places. The base ball grounds and the north side park are completely under water and look like lakes. A French woman, living near the French brewery, was surprised last night by the lower part of her house becoming flooded. The lady had to retire to the second story until she was rescued by friends.

Esquire Daniel Ryan has written Senator Barrett to introduce a law that will make it a misdemeanor for second hand and junk shop dealers to buy goods and articles from minors. Mr. Ryan says that the practice of purchasing articles from children and young people without regard to their acquirement has trained more thieves and sent more boys to the reform school and prison than any other cause he knows of.

Senator Barrett says the metropolitan police bill will not pass to apply to Fort Wayne. The legislators are averse to taking the right of local self-government from the people and besides the measure would increase the police expenses in this city something like $17,000.

The "Shadows of a Great City" played to a magnificent house at the Temple and Manager Simonson hung out the "Standing Room Only," card early in the evening. This show has been liberally advertised and to this fact is due its unprecedented business. If the Temple management cannot see this point we will arrange to shove a brick wall on them.

In a communication in the morning Gazette, "A Catholic" attempts to show that the democratic and not the republican party has been inclined to proscribe the official aspirations of Catholics. In this state the Catholics have been represented on almost every ticket and were always successful at the polls when the party was. In this city the Catholics hold the best offices in the gift of the people, from the mayor down. In the county, Auditor Neizer now heads that religious element and in the government appointments the Catholics largely predominate, from Postmaster Kaough down. THE SENTINEL feels that these gentlemen were honored, not because they were Catholics, but because they are representative American citizens, and active, deserving democrats. We only enumerate to show the mean weakness of the argument advanced by this over zealous "Catholic" who might be engaged in a more truthful and holier cause, if he is as near the heighth of perfection, as the tone of his own falacious communication would lead us to infer.

The Typos to Give a Reception.

There will be a type-setting contest the same night. The proprietors of the printing offices of this city will act as judges.

SAM JONES.

What He is Saying in Boston, Mass.

Flowers are God's thoughts in bloom.

It is the business of every man to fight evil.

God has not lost His power, but the pulpit has lost its voice.

Can a man be a christian if he votes one way and prays another?

You need not wait to ask a man to make a profession, for you can tell him by his acts.

Whisky is the worst enemy God or man ever had and the best friend the devil ever had.

Truth will not only take care of itself, but it will take care of the man who preaches it.

Though some men may beat me in living aright, no man shall beat me in repenting of my meanness.

It is every preacher's duty to denounce the things of hell just as much as it is to preach the beauty of Christ.

When a man just lives for what he can get and what clothes he can wear, he is not ten feet from the basement.

There never was a time in the history of the world when the gospel and religion needed so much backbone and nerve as now.

Every sin that man commits is a direct stab at his conscience and he stabs and stabs until conscience breathes its last and is dead forever.

If you will do what Jesus Christ tells you and you don't come out a whole man, then you have got an issue that will bankrupt the Bible.

A young lady once said to me (her father was a preacher, too): "My father don't believe in revivals." "Well," said I, "there's where your father and the devil are alike."

The "Shadows of a Great City."

This magnificent melo-drama was presented to an intelligent as well as a large and appreciative audience at the Temple opera house last night. The play is splendidly mounted, and the majority of the scenes, being located on the water fronts of New York City and Brooklyn, are readily recognized, and add to the interest of the drama. The story is well told, the characters are clearly defined, and the action is brisk. It illustrates vividly all phases of life in the metropolis, and depicts vice in sombre colors and virtue in its noblest forms. Nevertheless, it is not in any sense what is known as a "blood and thunder" play. It is, in fact, an American play of a high order, by an American writer, and the scenes are located in this country. Among the characters may be mentioned Miss Annie Ward Tiffany, who, as Biddy Ronan, has a rich brogue and a fund of witticisms which are greatly appreciated by the spectators; Miss Helen Rand, who has a fine stage presence, and who is a capable actress, assumes the dual role of Annie Standish, a poor woman, and Helen, her daughter; Geo. R. Edeson, as Jim Farren, has made his part very strong. Tho other members of the cast are first-class in every particular, and the play is given with a completeness and attention to detail which command the approbation of the public.

SOME FAMOUS OLD MAIDS.

Look at the list, Elizabeth, of England, one of the most illustrious modern sovereigns. Her rule over Great Britian certainly comprises the most brilliant literary age of the English-speaking people. Her political acumen was certainly put to as severe tests as that of any other ruler in the world ever was. Maria Edgeworth was an old maid. It was this woman's writings that first suggested the thought of writing similarly to Sir Walter Scott. Her brain might well be called the mother of the Waverly novels. Jane Porter lived and died an old maid. The children of her busy brain were "Thaddeus of Warsaw" and "The Scottish Chiefs," which have moved the hearts of millions with excitement and tears. Joanna Baillie, poet and play writer, was "one of 'em." Florence Nightingale, most gracious lady, heroine of Inkermann and Balaklava hospitals, has to the present written "Miss" before her name. The man who should marry her might well crave to take the name of Nightingale. Sister Dora, the brave spirit of English pest houses, whose story is as a helpful evangel, was the bride of the world's sorrow only. And then what names could the writer and the reader add to those whom the great world may not know, and the little world of the village, the church, the family know, and prize beyond all worlds.—North British Advertiser.

THE BEAUX AND BELLES OF NEW GUINEA.

The beaux and belles of New Guinea are by no means forbidding. Imagine a man about six feet nine inches in height, his body a nice brown color, covered, if he be a masher, with red earth and varnished with oil, his face painted in different colors, and a piece of polished stone through his nose, his hair long and frizzly, ornamented with bird of paradise plumes and cockatoo feathers, his teeth black or red, his ears weighted down with huge ear ornaments, his waist compressed to waspish proportions by a broad belt of bark, shell ornaments on his arms, dog teeth necklace round his neck, a breast ornament of boars' tusks or pearl shell, a gayly painted waist ribbon, with long streamers in front and behind, anklets and kneelets of colored flax, and a small netted bag over his shoulder—imagine all this and you have a typical New Guinean. The women match the men. The young girls wear abundance of ornaments, but after marriage few. They are profusely tattoed and wear a colored petticoat which reaches to the knee.

THE PARIS ROTHSCHILDS.

The Rothschilds deserve well of the Parisians. They spend their money royally. There is not a more hospitable house in the city than that of the Baron Alphonso in the Rue St Florentine. The Baronne Alphonse de Rothschild—a daughter of the London branch of the family—is a charming woman, and a perfect hostess, and, although a grandmamma, has retained a fair amount of good looks. Baron and Baronne Adolphe de Rothschild give dinners of a dozen covers, once a week, throughout the season, in the handsome dining-room on the first floor, which is opposite the picture-gallery. Now and then, also, a more splendid entertainment (to which a large number of guests are invited) in the grand hall downstairs, and the mansion in the Parc Monceaux is often still ablaze with light, long after the gardens have been plunged into darkness. Authors, press men, artists, and musicians are often bidden to these feasts. The Baroness Nathaniel is also a good friend and patron of literature and art, besides being an artist of no mean order herself. Her cousin, the Baroness Solomon, is a widow, and for many seasons past her house has only been open to a few private friends; but this year she sent out invitations for a grand ball, covered in part of her garden, installed an orchestra in the gallery of the great hall and opened up a series of crimson and white drawing-rooms worthy of a palace. Mlle. Helena de Rothschild is sole daughter of her house and home and as such somewhat despotic. These festivities were given in her honor and are, so they say, to be repeated in a week or so. The heiress is not after the usual pattern of young ladyism here. She has a suite of apartments of her own, eight horses for her separate use, is passionately fond of riding and driving, is in the habit of running down to Frascati's every now and then, (under the chaperonage of a governess), and when in town entertains her girl friends quite independently of the Baronne in her private dining-room or in the salle d'armes—a room hung around with trophies of arms—which she particularly affects.—San Francisco Argonaut.

Husband—"They don't do it, Sally. I can beat them myself. I haven't failed in a single prediction for two years."

W.—"Pshaw, John! I don't believe it. How can you tell when a storm is coming?"

H.—"By watching the whites of your eyes, Sally.—Newman Independent.

The Democrats Will Leave the Legislative Offices Alone in the Hands of the Present Incumbents.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Feb. 8.—The senate was not in session yesterday. The house was announced to meet at 11 o'clock, but when that hour arrived the speaker and one-half of the members were absent. After waiting for them half an hour, Secretary Smith called the house to order and Judge Gardiner was called to the chair. "A motion to adjourn is in order," said he, and it was made, put and carried in about two seconds.

Mr. Jewett's bill regulating the transportation of property by railways or other common carriers was passed. This bill is fashioned after the national inter-state commerce bill recently passed by congress.

The bill prohibiting non-members from wearing the G. A. R. badge was passed.

The committee reported favorably on a bill authorizing the counties to offer three cents per head for English sparrows; also favorably on a bill appropriating $140,000 for the maintenance of the three insane hospitals for this year and the two following.

It costs the state about $1,600 a day to support the general assembly. Of this $650 is expended for the senate and $950 for the house.

The democrats have had enough of joint convention and while they have not agreed definitely on the details of their future action, they have about decided not to go into convention any more, even for the purpose of electing a state librarian, state statistician, trustees of the benevolent institutions, directors of the state prisons, etc. All those positions are at present held by democrats, who under the law, hold until their successors are elected and qualified. In the absence of an election they will either continue in office or be re-appointed by the governor. Some of the democrats say, and Mr. Gordon, of Putnam, is very decidedly of this view, that if a fair and just bill for the reorganization of all the institutions is offered they will support it, and let the appointing power be solely in the hands of the governor.

The general fund of the state treasury is practically exhausted. The auditor of state will probably suspend payment from this fund to-day or to-morrow unless temporary relief is had from the present state legislature. There has been no positive refusal to honor orders as yet but because of the lowness of the funds and of the fact that the new treasurer of state will come into office on Thursday and it is therefore necessary for the auditor and treasurer to balance their books, the auditor is to-day paying out as little as possible, in order that the accounts may not be changed.

The democrats and republicans of the Indiana legislature balloted for next presidential candidate before adjournment Friday. The democratic vote was: Cleveland 30, Hill 16, McDonald 5, Thurman 3, Hayard 2. Republican vote: Harrison 38, Blaine 26, Sherman 8, Gresham 4, Weaver 4—E. of L. voting for latter.

There are several revivals in progress within the boundaries of Montgomery county. The Methodist churches at Alamo, Waveland and Linder have received several accessions to their membership. The Presbyterian church at Shannondale has had about 100 accessions. The Christian church at Crawfordsville is holding a protracted meeting. The Parkersburg Presbyterian church has been holding a series of meetings. Several persons have also united with the two Presbyterian churches and the Methodist church at Crawfordsville. About fifteen persons have joined the United Brethren church at College Grove. Several additions have also been made to the colored churches at Crawfordsville.

AT LAST.

A Comprehensive Plan Agreed Upon for Reorganization of the Nickel Plate Railway.

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—The questions that for months have vexed the holders of Nickel Plate bonds, and for six weeks have been the subject of active negotiations, are now in the way of settlement under a plan upon which all parties, according to Mr. Stillman, of the law firm of Butler, Stillman & Hubbard, are virtually agreed. The plan is a very long one. Its substantial features are as follows: The Nickel Plate property will be covered by the issue of $20,000,000 of 4 per cent. bonds to run for fifty years. These bonds must stand on their own merit, without guaranteed from the Lake Shore road. The fixed charges under the new plan will be $800,000 a year. Whenever the road may earn in any year $900,000 or more $10,000 must be turned into the sinking fund for the payment of the bonds at 102, if that figure will buy them. When the earnings do not reach so much, or the bonds cannot be bought at 102, the sinking fund will lapse for that year. The present Nickel Plate bond will receive 112 in new bonds, and the stockholders will pay an assessment of 10 per cent. on $5,000,000, their present holdings being converted at one-half their face value into new stock. Preferred stock will be issued for the amount of assessment. This will leave the company with $3,200,000 of first mortgage, $5,000,000 cash, and surplus earnings of $1,000,000 now in the hands of the receiver. All the road's obligations will thus have been met and the road will be fully equipped anew and put in first-class order. Foreclosure proceedings under the plan will begin at once. Mr. Stillman thinks that the reorganization will be perfected by June 1.

A Negro Ignorant of the Freedom of His Race is Made to Serve His Old Master Ever Since the War.

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—A special from Charleston, South Carolina, says: "Information of a reliable character has just been received here of the discovery of a negro man in one of the narrow valleys, near the Hog Back mountain, not far from Greenville, who has just learned of his emancipation. His story is that since the war, he has been working for Mr. Holly and that he was not allowed to come back to his kinsfolks; that he was flogged by his master, who gave him no money and few clothes. The man's name is Calvin Garmany. He ran off to the mountains just after the war and was only recently heard of by his brother, who lived near Greenville and who rescued him from servitude last week."

INFAMOUS.

A Miscreant Fires Upon a Passenger Train.

CINCINNATI, O., Feb. 8.—As the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Indianapolis train was about crossing the state line from Indiana into Ohio yesterday, a bullet fired by some unknown person came crashing through the window of the passenger car, passing closely in front of the head of Mr. A. P. Mitchell, of the firm of Valette & Mitchell, of New York City, and burying itself in the woodwork on the other side of the car. No clew of the miscreant has been found.

MACON, Ga., Feb. 8.—Two freight trains on the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia railroad collided at 3 o'clock this morning at Dubois, forty-nine miles below here, badly injuring Engineer Williams and killing a negro.

Sentenced for Contempt of Court.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Feb. 8.—Edward Loew, city editor of the Arbeiter Zeitung, was yesterday sentenced by Judge Sloan to thirty days labor in the house of correction. The decision was for contempt of court, in causing to be published libelous statements in connection with the trial of Paul Grouthoteb, the anarchist.

IMPORTANT.

The Wabash to Pass Into the Hands of Its Owners.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 8.—The purchasing committee of the Wabash railroad property announces that on March 1, they expect to take possession of their property, complying with the conditions of the sales by paying to the court $1,000,000 and give a bond for $1,000,000 to pay such awards as the court might make in winding up the affairs of the coal company.

A Restraining Injunction Dissolved.

CINCINNATI, Feb. 8.—A decision has been rendered by Judge Huston, of the common pleas court of this county, dissolving the injunction restraining the Emery Bros., of this city from attaching the property of the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton Railroad company, found in the state of New York to satisfy a judgment obtained in New York in 1882. The amount involved is $121,000 with interest. The claim for unpaid interest on the bonds of the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Indianapolis railroad guaranteed by the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton company.

ALMOST ENDED.

The Freight Handlers Strike Will Soon End Against the Strikers.

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—It is generally believed that the great strike is about to end. The Times says: "The fact is, the freight handlers strike is confessed to be a failure, even by themselves. They were refused work when they offered to return. The Pennsylvania and Jersey Central roads probably had the most offers of this kind. Both companies have an unusually mixed class of green hands."

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—There was considerable activity on the piers this morning and freight was being moved with much more dispatch than on any day since the strike. Many of the old freight handlers and longshoremen are coming back to work—not at places where they are known, but where they they are least likely to be known.

THE DISABILITY BILL.

Doubt as to Its Fate Fate—The Enormous Sum it Will Take From the Treasury.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—There is a good deal of doubt expressed in the official circles as to the fate of the disability pension bill. Many take the ground that if the bill becomes a law it will nearly bankrupt the country. Estimates of $150,000 are made as necessary to carry out its provisions. The steady growth of the pension fund since 1888 is an interesting study. In the year named there were 85,986 pensioners and the disbursements were $3,525,153. In 1875 the number of pensioners had grown to 234,825, with disbursements aggregating $29,653,116, while in 1886 there were 367,783 pensioners, receiving $64,584,270. The pension office estimates that the disability bill will, if it becomes a law, almost double the pension roll this year, and that the bill for the removal of the arrears limit, which will probably be voted upon next week, will, if enacted into law, cost the government $222,000,000.

In the senate to-day Mr. Ingalls presented a memorial from the citizens of New Lexington, Ohio, asking for the initiation of negotiations for the acquisition of Canada. Referred to the committee on foreign relations.

Secretary Manning, in giving his views on the Canadian fishery squabble, again puts in a lick for tariff reform. "It is much to be regretted that mediaeval tariff laws, like that cruel legacy of war which still encumbers the statute books of the United States, or a mediaeval non-intercourse policy, like that of the Dominion of Canada, approved by the queen in council on the threshold of her majesty's jubilee year, should be the divided disgrace of our common civilization," is the text on which he grows eloquent.

The bill now before the house committee on labor, extending the provisions of the eight-hour law to letter carriers, appears to be hopelessly "hung up." There is an undoubted majority in the house in favor of the bill, but it is alleged that Chairman John J. O'Neill is committed against it and will not allow it to leave his hands. A delegation of letter-carriers from all over the country is now in the city, and they are paying their respects to the St. Louis congressman in no complimentary manner.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—In executive session of the senate, yesterday afternoon, the nomination of John E. Dants, postmaster at Muncie, was confirmed.

Richard S. Davis, of Greenville, Ind., and Thomas Stevens, of Mount Vernon, were admitted yesterday, to practice before the interior department.

Representative Lowry was yesterday granted a leave absence from the house for ten days, on important business.

The third assistant postmaster general issued a statement yesterday showing the number of special deliveries for quarters ending September 30th and December 31. For Indianapolis, for the quarter ending with September, the number of deliveries was 2,592; for the quarter ending with December, 3,149.

Morris L. Miller, of Oneida county, New York, has submitted his petition of right to test the constitutionality of the civil-service act to the supreme court en banc without argument.

It is stated that Judge Holman will retire from congress at the close of the fiftieth congress and if he reappears in public life it will be as governor of Indiana. Some of Mr. Voorhees' most intimate friends state that he is very tired of the cares of state, and would gladly yield his position and commence the practice of his profession in New York could he be sure of a democratic successor.

A Kentuckian called on the President with a view of obtaining an office.

"Well, sir," said the President, who was busy, "what will you have?"

"M-make it the s-same as he-before."—New York Times.

SARGENT S. PRENTISS was the ideal orator of the South. A large and excellent oil portrait, presented by Judge Morris, of Natchez, has been hung in the room of the Supreme Court of Louisiana, the field of most of Mr. Prentiss' oratorical triumphs.

"COAL-OIL JOHNNY," who was made immensely rich by the discovery of petroleum, and who scattered his wealth with such a lavish hand, has descended step by step until he now has no place to lay his head save in a dreary cell in the Mount Holly (N. J.) Jail. The quondam possessor of millions is now a common tramp.

THE Japanese Government is said to have decided to authorize a new style of dress for the Judges of the law courts. Judges will be required by the new rules to wear a black garment when presiding at civil cases, and a red garment when presiding at criminal cases. The new rules will come into force in March next. A new style of dress will be authorized also for lawyers.

QUEEN VICTORIA'S dinner parties are very dreary affairs. It is said that in all the fifty years of the Queen's reign there has never been any sort of allusion to political or personal topics at her table. Everything of the sort is strictly prohibited, and proper names are never mentioned, so that nothing can possibly be more vapid than the little conversation that goes on, the usual subjects being the weather, scenery, art, and music.

ONE morning a Keyport, N. J., man built a fire in the kitchen range and was preparing to leave the room, when he heard a variety of strange noises from within the stove. At first he was startled, and then began an investigation. He had no sooner removed the cover than a large owl jumped out of the range and began flying blindly about the room. The bird was caught, but died in a short time. In the night it had come down through a long tile chimney into the range.

NOT long ago a man in Columbia, Pa., gave as a wedding present to a York couple an $8 clock, which he had bought on the installment plan. He paid $6 and was slow about paying the other two. So the agent, who knew where the clock was, went to York, scared the bride into giving it up, and then disappeared. The groom brought suit against the agent, but he could not be found, and the young man had to pay costs. He says when he marries his second wife he wants no presents on the installment plan.

JAMES PIERCE, of Shady Grove, La., saw bear tracks in a swamp on his farm, and a party was organized to hunt the bear. While the men and dogs were in the swamp Mr. Pierce walked through the fields adjacent unarmed. Suddenly a big bear came tearing out of the swamp. Pierce knew it would get away if not turned back, so he seized a club and chased brain back and forth through the fields, whacking him well meanwhile, until the animal at length turned to the swamp again, where it was shot and killed.

THE Massachusetts Supreme Court affirms the decision of the lower courts that a sleeping car company is liable to a passenger for any loss he sustains by robbery while occupying a berth in one of the company's cars. "It is the company's duty," the court says, "to use reasonable means to guard the passenger against theft; and if through want of care the personal effects of a passenger, such as he might reasonably carry with him, are stolen, the company is liable. Such a rule is required by public policy and by the interests of both the passenger and the company."

THERE are forty people who imagine they have a lizard in their stomach where one real case exists. This is on the authority of a Chicago doctor, who goes further and avows that nothing but a lape-worm can live an hour in the human stomach.

AT a meeting of the "Society of Medical Jurisprudence," in New York, Dr. Brill objected to hanging, on the ground that it neither killed instantly nor destroyed consciousness instantly. The methods of killing by electricity, by poisoning, and by the garrote, he objected to as not more prompt nor less painful and barbarous. The guillotine, he said, was the best means. By instantly severing the blood conduits, muscles and nerves of the neck the victim was instantly killed, instantly losing sensation or consciousness. Shooting through the head or brain, where the gun was discharged from a fixed rest after being aimed by an anatomical expert, the Doctor said, was better than hanging, though not so good as chopping the head off. Another physician, Dr. Peters, favored the garrote for murderers, holding that the use of electricity or any other medical agent was degrading to the science of medicine, while shooting is a military punishment, and not sufficiently degrading. A lawyer advocated chloroforming criminals before executing them, while another advocated turning them over to a medical commission for scientific purposes, even going so far as to indorse vivisection of them.

EX-MAYOR GRACE, of New York, and his brother Michael will spend $2,000,000 in this country for locomotives and rolling stock, on behalf of an English syndicate, to equip the Peruvian railroads, which it is proposed to extend. The locomotives will be of peculiar design, especially constructed for running up steep grades. Cars for freight and passenger traffic will be sent and will be constructed for the peculiarity of that country and climate. The main object in building and equipping this road is to reach the renowned silver mines of Cerro de Pasco, which are situated about 150 miles from the Pacific coast in a basin 1,200 feet above the level of the sea. Although the mines are less than two miles square, it is estimated that they have yielded since their discovery more than $500,000,000 of the precious metal. Ten years ago Henry Meiggs, who had taken contracts for building the great railroad system of Peru, which was designed to bring all her interior mining and agricultural districts within easy reach of the coast, conceived the plan of extending the Transandean Railroad, which has since only been constructed eighty miles from the sea. He further proposed to open a drainage tunnel, tapping the famous silver mines of Peru 150 feet below the level of the present workings, thus carrying off the rapid accumulations of water that have always been a serious obstacle in working the mines. It is now proposed to prosecute this work vigorously, and new contracts have been made with the Peruvian Government. A scientific expedition, including several Philadelphians, was sent on to Peru last summer to prepare the way for the builders.

A SINGULAR accident occurred on the Shenandoah Valley Railroad, says a Hagerstown (Md.) dispatch to the Baltimore American. As the north-bound passenger train was nearing Buchanan, some one noticed that the hose attached to the air-brakes was leaking. The train was stopped and the entire crew left the train for the purpose of repairing the leak, leaving on board the passengers, the express messenger, the postal clerk, and the newsboy. The brakeman was sent back to flag a freight that was coming in the rear. The freight soon made its appearance, and, not having been notified in time to stop on the heavy downward grade, plunged into the hindmost car of the passenger train, which was a Pullman, wrecking the greater part of it and badly injuring the rest of the train. The concussion was so great that the throttle valve of the passenger engine was thrown wide open and the train leaped forward with an impetus of over a mile a minute. So sudden was the start that the crew was unable to board the engine. The wildest train ran at a high rate of speed until the steam was exhausted, when it came to a standstill about fifteen miles from the place of collision. During the flight the passengers were thrown about in their seats, and were almost wild with terror. Apprehending that some southbound train might collide with the runaway after it had stopped, all the passengers left the cars and built fires in the fields to await the freight, which they thought would bring up the crew of their train. After the lapse of over an hour the rear train hove in sight, and the passenger engineer and fireman were soon at their places. The brakeman who had been sent back to flag the freight no sooner saw that a collision was inevitable than he struck for the woods and has not yet turned up. Several of the passengers received ornices, but no one was seriously injured by the collision.

WIGS.

About 1620 premature baldness compelled Louis XIII. to don a wig, and the fashion of false hair for men as well as women then really began to make its way to France, the future scene of its greatest splendor, and the arbiter then, as now, of the whole world of fashion. Wig-making had almost become a lost art, and the French barbers at first could only fix the hair on a leather cap; then they formed a sort of network, and in time acquired uncommon skill in attaching single hairs to bits of silk and in dressing them into any desired shape. Louis XIV. was king thirty years before he regularly wore a perruke, and in his first the false hair was artfully mingled with the natural locks. But, everything being great in his reign, wigs had to partake of the majesty of the age, and they grew to an immensity never known before or since. A single perruke sometimes weighed two pounds, cost 2,000 or 3,000 francs, and required the cropping of ten other heads. Indeed, Binette, the wig-maker of Louis XIV., is reported as saying that to cover the head of the sovereign he would despoil the heads of all his subjects. This worthy had his reward, for the great folio wig, the grandest of the species, is still known in France by his name. There was, of course, a cabinet des perruques at Versailles, and among the minute miracles enshrined in his large glass press was the golden wig worn by Louis XIV. when he appeared as Phœbus in a ballet. No sooner was this mighty monarch pleased to open his royal eyes each morning, than a barber humbly bowed before him and presented two or more perukes to be chosen from. When the king had risen and had his own hair combed, a short wig was brought him for his morning reception, after which he put on the wig of the day. He sometimes changed the wig during the day, as when returning from the chase, or going to walk or to mass. At one time forty wig-makers were appointed to the court, and later a corporation of 200 was formed for Paris and vicinity, their statutes enacting the use of white tin basins as signs, in distinction from the yellow ones of the surgeons. The foppish abbes of the time were eager enough to be up with the fashion in wigs, and succeeded after much opposition from the more sober-minded of the cloth.—Lippincott's Magazine.

"AH, Mrs. Crimsonbeak," said Miss Fussenfeather, after conversing with that lady's husband at the musical one evening, "I've found your husband out at last." "That's not a difficult thing to do," replied Mrs. Crimsonbeak, indifferently. "Come round to the house any time of night and you'll always find him out."—Exchange.

The Breath of a chronic catarrh patient is often so offensive that he cannot go into society and he becomes an object of disgust. After a time ulceration sets in, the spongy bones are attacked and frequently entirely destroyed. A constant source of discomfort is the dripping of purulent secretions into the throat, sometimes producing inveterate bronchitis, which in its turn has been the exciting cause of pulmonary disease. The brilliant results which have attended its use for years past properly designate Ely's Cream Balm as by far the best and only real cure.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferers at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub wakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Jan, 19-eod&w 1y

SO AWFULLY ENGLISH.

The things in which the New Yorkers ape the English, writes an observer to the Brooklyn Eagle, are the baggy trousers, heavy boots, an inane expression of countenance, the single glass, a lumbering and bent-kneed gait, an ungraceful carriage, and a monstrously unpleasant drawl. These are the characteristics of the London cockney and English gentleman who come over here often to tell their American friends in confidence that their first impression on meeting a lot of Anglomaniacs is precisely the same as that they experienced in London if they have the misfortune to fall in with a lot of loud voices and artificial cockneys. You never catch an Anglomaniac copy the dignified manner, reticence, and studious though seldom graceful politeness of an English gentleman. They prefer the contrary characteristics of the cockney. In the same way the dainty dandies of Paris who formerly revelled in varnished boots of the smallest possible dimensions, the smuggest of gloves, and the nattiest clothes imaginable, have taken to loud and horsey clothes of the cumbersome design and coarse material of English stablemen. The peculiar thing in which the English ape the French is une the cut of the hair—and if anything makes a robust and highly colored English face look absurd it is the finicky arrangements of the hair in vogue in Paris—and the manner and particularly the language of the men of Paris. It seems to be the rule with Englishmen to avoid speaking their own language as much as possible, and of all nations they speak the most execrable French. The rather ingenious theory has been advanced that Anglomania in New York is the result of the copyright laws. As it costs American publishers nothing to issue foreign novels as fast as they come out, the result of there being no international copyright laws, the country has been flooded with British novels for years. There have been no American authors of consequence, so publishers preferred to bring out books for which they had to pay the authors nothing, rather than bind themselves to pay a fixed royalty. Therefore nearly every book which the rising generation has read during the last twenty years has narrated the love experiences of Lord Cecil Montmorenci d'Montrosser and Lady Gwendoline Gladyss de Nothing in the castles and mansions of England. Overlooking the fact that English novelists never, by any chance, give their heroes and heroines English names, it is a fact that nowhere can one find such slavish admiration, adulation, sycophancy, and toadying love for the British aristocracy, as in the average English novel. The dearest wish of half the youth of America to-day is to look and act like the Lord Cecils they have so frequently read about.

KILLED BY METEORIC STONES.

Considering the number of meteoric stones which reach the earth's surface it would not be surprising if many lives had been destroyed by them. It is stated that loss of life resulted from a large fall in Africa; that about the year 1020 many persons and animals were killed; that in 1511, about 5 o'clock one evening, a priest was struck and killed; and that still later, in 1650, a monk was killed. But these, according to Mr. James R. Gregory, seem to be the only instances recorded of death from falling meteorites.

THE SMALL BOY'S QUEST.

A Persian philosopher being asked by what method he had acquired so much knowledge, answered: "By not being prevented by shame from asking questions when I was ignorant." According to this notion, a 5-year-old boy traveling in the cars with his mother, ought to acquire enough knowledge in a journey of fifteen miles to split his head wide open.—Norristown Herald.

In Barbadoes, one Sunday, the captain of a vessel from New York saw a very important colored lady, gloved, shoed, and parasoled, walking to church with a barefooted colored servant, carrying her bag and prayer-book. He was astonished at the lady of color being able to keep up so much state, but was told that the couple were sisters, and if he would wait until next Sunday he would see the situation reversed.

Pond's Extract.

As a household remedy there are few family medicines that are as popular as Pond's Extract. It can be found in the houses of almost every family, north, south, east or west, in this country and is largely used abroad. First made over forty years ago in a small way, it has continued to increase till now its sales run into millions of bottles a year. Its uses are almost universal and one of its valuable properties is that it is perfectly harmless. In cases of wounds, its healing powers are wonderful, its astringent properties stopping the flow of blood; for bad wounds its just the thing to apply until the doctor arrives. For inflammations, the pain and swelling go down immediately on its application. To name what it would do would fill a book. Reader, we ask you, if you have not already done so, to try it." Be sure to get the genuine.—St. Louis (Mo.) Republican.

MIGHT WE ALL GO NAKED!

I lived seven years in Colorado, and have herded sheep in weather so cold that the food I took out for lunch froze hard in my pockets—thermometer sometimes fifteen or twenty degrees below zero—and I used to wear less clothing than I do now, although naturally sensitive to cold, owing to weak circulation. I well remember a half-witted man, Marvin by name (who has since then committed a dreadful crime,) who used to get a precarious living by hunting in the mountains, and who, in the coldest winter weather, went about in rags—practically unclothed. Another "old-timer," who was a hostler, invariably went about in the severest weather and most biting winds, with his vest open and his chest perfectly naked and exposed. Surely the street Arabs, who are at once half-starved and half-naked, prove that the power to resist cold is merely a matter of habit, and that we might make ourselves "all face" if we liked, though doubtless a modicum of clothing is comfortable, if of doubtful sanitary value. I firmly believe that overcoats are the most fruitful cause of winter colds, and that the best and safest plan is to make little or no difference between summer and winter clothing.—W. Mathieu Williams, in Clothing and Furnisher.

Captain Mitchell, of the bark Antoine Sala, New York and Havana trade, came home in May, entirely helpless with rheumatism. He went to the mountains, but receiving no benefit, at his wife's request began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla. He immediately began to improve; in two months his rheumatism was all gone, and he sailed in command of his vessel a well man. Hoods Sarsaparilla will help you. Sold by all druggists.

FRUIT HOUSE PRICES FOR '87

Quite a change has taken place in a great many goods the last sixty days, the tendency being in most cases upwards. This is the case, especially in Coffee and Dried Fruits, Sugars, Teas, Syrups, Spices and Tobaccos, have not advanced, but from indications they will.
It will pay our customers to purchase liberally.
We have just received forty hogsheads of choice New Orleans Sugar.

A nice yellow Sugar which we are selling at 4½c. This is the lowest price such sugars have ever been sold at.

Sugars—White, Brown and Yellow New Orleans.

No advance on them. Choice yellow, 5c; best standard A coffee white, 6c; crushed, powdered and granulated, 6½c; choice yellow New Orleans, 4½c.

NO ADVANCE ON TEAS,

Yet they will not likely remain at such low prices in the face of the large advance on Coffee. We continue to maintain our prestige in the Tea trade. Our trade has grown immensely in that line. People have no longer to send off to purchase their Teas. In order to save money we keep up the plan of buying in large lots of the importers and re-selling direct to our customers at a small profit, thereby saving to our customers the intermediate profits of jobber and wholesale dealer—which is not less than 10 to 20c.

Good, 15c per pound; choice, 20c; best, 50c. Imperial tea—Green, good, 30c; best, 50c, Gunpowder tea, 30c; best, 50c. Oolong or Black tea, 20c, 30c; best, 50c; Japan tea, 20c, 30c; best, 50c. Above prices on teas are the lowest on record and the best teas are of the highest quality—no better anywhere. The other grades are good, sweet, drawing teas and will please the most fastidious tea drinkers. Just give them a trial and satisfy yourself.

Coffee—Rio, Java and Roasted.

Best Rio coffee, 13c, per pound; best roasted Rio, 15c per pound; German coffee, 20c per pound; Housekeepers' Choice, 23c per pound; roasted Java, 25c per pound.

Notwithstanding that the railroads and monopolists made a strong demand on President Cleveland to veto the interstate commerce bill, he proved himself true to his high trust and the interests of the people by making the measure a law. Mr. Cleveland is deeper in the hearts of the people than a few politicians and newspaper writers realize.

The insurance men of the state are proposing to make a brisk fight against the bill introduced in the house by Mr. Ibach, which, they claim, would work a great hardship on the companies if passed. It provides that in case of total loss by fire, whatever the value of the property may have been, the insured shall be entitled to the full face value of the policy.

The Warsaw Times says: "Mrs. T. P. Kestor, who furnishes the dramatic and society news for the Sunday Fort Wayne Gazette, has created a popular department in each of these specialties, and is observant, pains-taking, and racy, and nothing in the Sunday Gazette is more closely scanned than the contributions of 'Judith.'"

D. W. Caldwell, receiver of the Nickel Plate, filed his petition, before Judge O'Rourke, asking leave to settle a claim for damages made by T. M. McKinney, administrator of William S. McKinney, arising out of the killing of the latter at the Nickel Plate bridge west of the city this winter. The receiver was authorized to compromise the claim for $1,000. Hon. R. C. Bell filed the petition for Mr. Caldwell.

Mr. C. A. Bookwalter, of this city, was yesterday chosen secretary of the state printing bureau, by the republican state officers. Governor Gray objected to the removal of Mr. Fish, the present incumbent. Mr. Bookwalter is a Knight of Labor and a member of the Typographical union, of which he is president. It is said that Governor Gray and State Auditor Rice, before the latter went out of office, offered the clerkship of the state board of printing to Thomas Grenelle, the editor of the Labor Signal, but that he declined it.

The marked attention and increasing attendance at the Christian church revivals, conducted by Evangelist Blaney, evince at least that there is power in the plain logical Bible truths. Everybody says, "How plain he makes the Bible." Hear him to-night on the deepest subject of revelations, viz.: "The Resurrection of the Dead." Services all this week.

The water in the rivers is very high and overflowing the banks in many places. The base ball grounds and the north side park are completely under water and look like lakes. A French woman, living near the French brewery, was surprised last night by the lower part of her house becoming flooded. The lady had to retire to the second story until she was rescued by friends.

Esquire Daniel Ryan has written Senator Barrett to introduce a law that will make it a misdemeanor for second hand and junk shop dealers to buy goods and articles from minors. Mr. Ryan says that the practice of purchasing articles from children and young people without regard to their acquirement has trained more thieves and sent more boys to the reform school and prison than any other cause he knows of.

Senator Barrett says the metropolitan police bill will not pass to apply to Fort Wayne. The legislators are averse to taking the right of local self-government from the people and besides the measure would increase the police expenses in this city something like $17,000.

The "Shadows of a Great City" played to a magnificent house at the Temple and Manager Simonson hung out the "Standing Room Only," card early in the evening. This show has been liberally advertised and to this fact is due its unprecedented business. If the Temple management cannot see this point we will arrange to shove a brick wall on them.

In a communication in the morning Gazette, "A Catholic" attempts to show that the democratic and not the republican party has been inclined to proscribe the official aspirations of Catholics. In this state the Catholics have been represented on almost every ticket and were always successful at the polls when the party was. In this city the Catholics hold the best offices in the gift of the people, from the mayor down. In the county, Auditor Neiser now heads that religious element and in the government appointments the Catholics largely predominate, from Postmaster Kaough down. THE SENTINEL feels that these gentlemen were honored, not because they were Catholics, but because they are representative American citizens, and active, deserving democrats. We only enumerate to show the mean weakness of the argument advanced by this over zealous "Catholic" who might be engaged in a more truthful and holier cause, if he is as near the heights of perfection, as the tone of his own fallacious communication would lead us to infer.

The Types to Give a Reception.

On Friday evening, February 17, 1887, Fort Wayne Typographical Union will give a grand benefit ball for the benefit of a sick printer, and it promises to be a big success. These committees have it in charge:

Reception Committee.—W. E. McDermut, H. O. Fisher, J. F. Casterline, J. F. Winbaugh, Harry Williamson, W. A. Tigar, F. C. Tolan.

There will be a type-setting contest the same night. The proprietors of the printing offices of this city will act as judges.

SAM JONES.

What He is Saying in Boston, Mass.

Flowers are God's thoughts in bloom.

It is the business of every man to fight evil.

God has not lost His power, but the pulpit has lost its voice.

Can a man be a christian if he votes one way and prays another?

You need not wait to ask a man to make a profession, for you can tell him by his acts.

Whisky is the worst enemy God or man ever had and the best friend the devil ever had.

Truth will not only take care of itself, but it will take care of the man who preaches it.

Though some men may beat me in living aright, no man shall beat me in repenting of my meanness.

It is every preacher's duty to denounce the things of hell just as much as it is to preach the beauty of Christ.

When a man just lives for what he can get and what clothes he can wear, he is not ten feet from the basement.

There never was a time in the history of the world when the gospel and religion needed so much backbone and nerve as now.

Every sin that man commits is a direct stab at his conscience and he stabs and stabs until conscience breathes its last and is dead forever.

If you will do what Jesus Christ tells you and you don't come out a whole man, then you have got an issue that will bankrupt the Bible.

A young lady once said to me (her father was a preacher, too): "My father don't believe in revivals." "Well," said I, "there's where your father and the devil are alike."

The "Shadows of a Great City."

This magnificent melo-drama was presented to an intelligent as well as a large and appreciative audience at the Temple opera house last night. The play is splendidly mounted, and the majority of the scenes, being located on the water fronts of New York City and Brooklyn, are readily recognized, and add to the interest of the drama. The story is well told, the characters are clearly defined, and the action is brisk. It illustrates vividly all phases of life in the metropolis, and depicts vice in sombre colors and virtue in its noblest forms. Nevertheless, it is not in any sense what is known as a "blood and thunder" play. It is, in fact, an American play of a high order, by an American writer, and the scenes are located in this country. Among the characters may be mentioned Miss Annie Ward Tiffany, who, as Biddy Ronan, has a rich brogue and a fund of witticisms which are greatly appreciated by the spectators; Miss Helen Raud, who has a fine stage presence, and who is a capable actress, assumes the dual role of Annie Standish, a poor woman, and Helen, her daughter; Geo. R. Edson, as Jim Farren, has made his part very strong. The other members of the cast are first-class in every particular, and the play is given with a completeness and attention to detail which command the approbation of the public.

SOME FAMOUS OLD MAIDS.

Look at the list, Elizabeth, of England, one of the most illustrious modern sovereigns. Her rule over Great Britain certainly comprises the most brilliant literary age of the English-speaking people. Her political acumen was certainly put to as severe tests as that of any other ruler in the world ever was. Maria Edgeworth was an old maid. It was this woman's writings that first suggested the thought of writing similarly to Sir Walter Scott. Her brain might well be called the mother of the Waverly novels. Jane Porter lived and died an old maid. The children of her busy brain were "Thaddeus of Warsaw" and "The Scottish Chiefs," which have moved the hearts of millions with excitement and tears. Joanna Baillie, poet and play writer, was "one of 'em." Florence Nightingale, most gracious lady, heroine of Inkermann and Balaklava hospitals, has to the present written "Miss" before her name. The man who should marry her might well crave to take the name of Nightingale. Sister Dora, the brave spirit of English pest houses, whose story is as a help-ful evangel, was the bride of the world's sorrow only. And then what names could the writer and the reader add to those whom the great world may not know, and the little world of the village, the church, the family know, and prize beyond all worlds.—North British Advertiser.

THE BEAUX AND BELLES OF NEW GUINEA.

The beaux and belles of New Guinea are by no means forbidding. Imagine a man about six feet nine inches in height, his body a nice brown color, covered, if he be a masher, with red earth and varnished with oil, his face painted in different colors, and a piece of polished stone through his nose, his hair long and frizzly, ornamented with bird of paradise plumes and cockatoo feathers, his teeth black or red, his ears weighted down with huge ear ornaments, his waist compressed to wasp-ish proportions by a broad belt of bark, shell ornaments on his arms, dog teeth necklace round his neck, a breast ornament of boars' tusks or pearl shell, a gayly painted waist ribbon, with long streamers in front and behind, anklets and kneelets of colored fiax, and a small netted bag over his shoulder—imagine all this and you have a typical New Guinean. The women match the men. The young girls wear abundance of ornaments, but after marriage few. They are profusely tattood and wear a colored petticoat which reaches to the knee.
